

Media Contact:
Digital Marketing Team
Marketing@talkingparents.com

Headline: TalkingParents Introduces Accountable PaymentsSM
Byline: Co-parents can now send, receive, and request payments within TalkingParents.

Fort Walton Beach, FL: TalkingParents, a co-parenting communication service, recently released an additional update to their robust communication platform.

TalkingParents introduced Accountable PaymentsSM as the latest feature in their quest to provide a comprehensive service that meets the complex needs of co-parenting. This secure and easy to use feature allows co-parents to send, receive, and request payments.

Accountable PaymentsSM gives co-parents the ability to request, send, and receive payments for any expenses that arise in a shared-parenting situation. From medical bills, to childcare, extracurricular activities, and other needs, parents can quickly create online payments. As with all TalkingParents features, Accountable PaymentsSM was built to focus on creating transparency and accountability between co-parents. This means that every action is timestamped and available within the Payments Record.

TalkingParents' complete list of features includes Accountable CallingSM, Secure Messaging, Shared Calendar, Info Library, File Vault, Attachment Library, and the Personal Journal. TalkingParents aims to help co-parents avoid and resolve disputes by creating accurate and unalterable Records of all their interactions. Customers can order Calling, Messaging, Payments, and Calendar Records as digital PDF downloads or certified printed hard copies.

ABOUT TALKINGPARENTS

Through their free website and paid mobile apps, TalkingParents improves accountability and communication between co-parents. TalkingParents is the only co-parenting service to offer Accountable CallingSM.

TalkingParents helps co-parents avoid disputes and focus on the most important people in their lives—their children. TalkingParents has been mentioned in TechCrunch, Women's Health, Romper, Fast Company, Fatherly, and Us Magazine Online.